

Brett brings a breadth of experience to the Pasadena Symphony. Currently Artistic Director and Conductor of Oregon's Sunriver Music Festival, he previously served as Music Director of the Colorado Symphony in Denver, after four years with The Cleveland Orchestra, rising from Assistant to Associate Conductor, becoming only the fifth in the orchestra's hundred-year history.

Brett was raised in Seattle and now resides in Denver with his family. He vividly recalls the music from Star Wars and Superman having a tremendous impact on him as a child. "The first time I heard an orchestra was in a movie theater on a film soundtrack," he explains, "I wanted to be a film composer but ended up writing orchestral works that, in a twist of fate, I started conducting, which I discovered was my true passion."

"I'm deeply honored and absolutely thrilled to be joining the Pasadena Symphony as its next Music Director," says Brett. "From the first moment we made music together in March 2022, it was clear that there was a special connection between the musicians and me, and that same chemistry has since extended beyond the stage to our friends in the audience. I couldn't be more excited for the musical journey that lies ahead."
