Fund the Future

The Pasadena Symphony Association is committed to getting our youth back on track after losing a full academic year due to the pandemic. Right now, we're leading the way by bringing students back to in-person, after school and in-classroom ensemble instruction, safely and at full capacity. Our dedicated musical professionals teach weekly instrumental curriculum to more than 600 students from 46 schools every year.

To achieve this high level of service, especially with new health-related safety guidelines, we have had to double our education budget to fund a layered matrix of rehearsal schedules to adhere to social distancing protocols. We also tripled our weekly schedules for conductors and coaches, doubled our small group sectionals for intimate 10:1 student to teacher ratios in order to get our students caught up on their musical proficiency. But we can't do it alone - providing quality music education is an expensive endeavor, and in this challenging time we need your help to Fund-the-Future and prepare the next generation for great accomplishments. We're counting on you.
